

Motto of Enlightenment

心密二祖仁知阿奢黎

By Renzhi Acharya

Neither with mind nor without mind

Neither not seeing nor not hearing

Clearly perceiving everything but not dwelling in perceptions

Seeing nowhere at all to dwell it is the true non-dwelling

If the mind doesn't dwell where do delusions stand

If delusions don't stand our impedances dissolve themselves

How do minds arise they arise due to circumstances

Circumstances don't inherently exist as they are part of illusions

Marvelous and numerous functions is the mind responding to perceptions

When the entangled mind ceases the birthless nature reveals in an instant

The nature of the birthless it is invisible to eyes

In the unfathomable universe there is an absolute existence

Those awakened to its presence reach the true enlightenment

Being free from desire the mind rests in oneness

With no mind to be deluded the true samadhi it is
When the true samadhi is realized there is neither movement nor stillness
No gain and no loss no affection and no aversion
The nature being changeless can rise to meet all circumstances
Unchanging and flowing with life there is no beginning or ending
This is the secret to becoming a Buddha simple as this

-The End-
